How We Feel About A Few Things.

(By The Editor)

When you get it into your head that the whole world has gone wrong, it merely means that you have gone wrong.

The man who is always cheerful is sometimes a bore, but the one who is always grouchy is always bore.

A dozen good turns you do another will all be forgotten after the one bad turn you do him. No man is a success that children do not like, and no man is a total failure whom they do like.

When a man does not like his job he can change it and not be blamed, but it's different with a housewife.

A survey of the field of men reveal that too many half-mile horses have been entered in the mile runs.

Judged from the way they get it on, some of the girls belong to the Cubist school of painters.

To get relief from discouragement didn't think how much worse off somebody else is, but how much better off you are.

There is a difference between being a money maker and a money taker.

Did you ever know an automobile owner that didn't plan to buy a bigger car?

A father always knows there is no man good enough to marry his daughter—and he is right.

An old dog that can't be taught new tricks isn't much of a dog. Every man has been in love at least once in his life—with himself.

It just naturally seems to be ordained that those who have philanthropic hearts don't have philanthropic pocketbooks.

And it happens that men whose talks are filled with stories of "big deals" presently make these deals under the table.

Many a man has to wait until the first of the month before he can tell the difference between calico and crepe de chene.

Nervousness is often mistaken for ambition and general fussiness for real work.

A humorist has the reputation of being chronically sad, but surely there is nothing sadder than trying to make a grumpy world laugh.

It has been said that, tomorrow is another day, but how do you know there will be one.

The man has the reputation of not being afraid of anything in the world, is merely the man whose point of cowardice has not been diseased by the world.

When old men play they sometimes make young men laugh, and when young men work they sometimes make old men laugh.

When a man gets to the point where he poses as an authority on any one subject he never seems to have any practical use.

A woman may have every virtue and every grace and spoil them all by having a shrill voice.

"The follies of youth" are so called by those who are committing the supreme folly of being old.

The dishonest trust nobody themselves less than anybody.

Many failures are caused by mistaking failure for accomplishment.
